Our Chincha Islands Correspondence.

CHINCHA ISLANDS, Peru, Aug. 24, 1856. Run from Cape Horn—The Guano Trade—Yield in Former Years—Shipments and Contracts—The Flost in Port—Chincha Cliques and Aristocrats—Inland Explora-tions—American Ladies in Trade—Sabbath Descration est Man-An Excitement Amongst the Ship cannot allow the opportunity of giving you a description of the islands to pass by. I am here on my way to New York via Cape Horn. We arrived here two days after be sailing of four fine ships for home, and found our-selves obliged to remain four weeks for another oppor-tunity. During our short stay I have been a close obver of men and things, and have been able to vie a human nature in many of its different phases.

I have been unable to obtain any valuable statistical information in regard to the amount of guano now on the islands, the amount per year shipped, &c., but to th ess of Mr. Sterling, government engineer, I have (morth, middle and south,) as ascertained from survey, about four and a half million tons; during the year 1854 there was shipped to all parts of the world about three hundred thousand tons; in 1855, about four hundred sand tons; and this year, (1856) thus far, about two hundred thousand tons; in all about nine hundred thou sand tons, leaving at present on the islands about three million and a half tons. From these calculations others may be made in regard to the value of the islands, &c., by any person who cares to arrive at any such informa tion. That the guano could be taken away much faster is not a matter of question. One has but to look at the islands and he will naturally inquire, "Why are ships detained here so long?" Of course if it was not for the great detention here, and the consequent great expense, the number of ships would increase, and, of course, the amount of guano exported would also increase. There are at present about ten stutes (public) on the two Islands, (North and Middle, the South island never having been worked.) There might be one hundred.

One man has the contract from the Peruvian govern-ment for digging the guano and loading the boats, and that man is all powerful. He is, in fact, the Peruvian government. His wealth is unbounded, and his influence in consequence is great. He has the most to say in drawing up the charter parties, and, of course, forces the ships to remain here as long as possible. While ship-owners will agree to his terms, things will remain as drawing up the charter parties, and, of course, forces the ships to remain here as long as possible. While ship cowners will agree to his terms, things will remain as now. By the present charter ships are to remain at the islands twelve days for each hundred tons register, so that a ship registering one thou and tons, by the gresent one sided charter, must remain here one hundred and twenty days. Such a sinp can be loaded in fifteen or twenty days, so that the authorities here can keep her idle about one hundred days. In order to save time, American shipmasters have purchased the privilers of buying guano trom different parts of the island, and have made their own shutes and try the guano with their own mee. Although this may save proved profitable to some, they have introduced a lad rule, as many ships do not wish to enter into such as arrangement, and these vessels are o biged to stay all their lay days; whereas, had thus paying for the guano lever been practised, the ships would got by this time as good despatch as they could wish. But few Peruvians can retuse a bribe, and favors can be purchased here at the hands of any man who has them to bestow, and these who are too conscientious to offer to use the "black mail" system, must be content to come in second best.

Though the agents of the government contractor, that is the managing man here, pretend to score the idea of heing bought and sold, yet that this is done every day, dither directly or indirectly, is well known.

There are at present about thirty vessels here in all, a very small fleet, and yet they are loading slowly, because hey will not buy despatch. Our soip owners at home an remedy this if they will. All interested complain oudly of the neglect they meet at the hands of their governments. A man-of war, either English or American, is needed here at all times. Not a day passes without some rouble either with the authorities or the crews of ships. The crew of the British ship Occamenta recorded a few hays ago, and because the captain outd obtain no bless them? and success attend them. It is very pleasant for our shipmasters, and especially those coming here with their families, to find a countryman so obliging and attentive as is Mr. Groeby.

Formerly, at these islands, no difference could be noticed between the Fabbath here and the same day is the United States. Service was held on board of some snip every Studay, and was regularly attended by the captains in the fleet, with their families. But the custom has passed away, and foreigners follow in the footsteps of the Feruviana, and make the Caristian Sabbath a day of general rejoteing and carousing. It is thought by many that the American Seamen's Friend Society would make a good move by sending a chapian here. He could be well supported, and of course would, if he were of the right stamp, do much good. The Feruviae government can, or at least to, prevent us from holding frotestant service in Caliac and Lima; but to interfere in any matter which transpires on toard of an American stip they would hardly dare—at least we should think so. However, they dare do almost anything.

The impositions practised upon shipmasters, especially Americans, are of soo gross a nature to pass unnoticed. I say especially Americans because the Eaglish captains have but little of that steamboat nature which is and always has been characteristic of the commanders of our ships. They take things easy, and expect to remain here all their lay days, thinking that, as their owners at home have been parties to the contract, that in carrying out these contracts to the letter the interests of their owners do not suffer. But with Yankees its far different They cannot remain on board of their ships and receive from Dre to ten tons of guano per day, when they ould easily take care of one hundred, without feeling nervous and dissatisfied. Consequently they (at least some of them) use all possible means to get despatch, arguing that, with their ships, tail crew's and heavy expenses, "time is money." In order to obtain quick despatch, money t before them they can instruct their captains how to act. It would be better for all if bribery could be done away with.

So much has been said in the pablic journals at home in regard to the coolie, or Ghineae slavery question, that a lew words in regard to the laborers on these islands may not be amis. That the Chinamen here are slaves, no man of common sense can deny; but that a great change has taken place in their moral condition within the part year is also true. They were once treated like beasts of burden, and supposed to possess ob human feeling. I have been much upon the middle taland, the largest of the group, and have made it my business to make myself as well acquainted as possible with the moral and physical condition of the Chinamea. The managers have found out that it is their best podey to treat them like men. They cost money, and are property—and under their former cruel treatment many of them committed suicide by throwing themselves to death, and other ways. Besides, the whipping system made them undit to work; the miserable provision dealt out to them did not sustain mature, and many of them died. Upon my visit here last year bits was their condition. But now I notice a great difference. They have a village—village theatre—laws of their own formation for their government—are well fod and clothed, and are apparently contented and happy. I said policy had been studied in making this change. But I would be defing injustice to Mr. Matees, the manager of the middle island, were I not to testify to his kindness to his employée. He is a good master, and his men all love him. I have read part of my letter to an old resident here, (an American) and he tells me Mr. Matees is a man who cannot be bought or soid. I have every reason to believe this to be correct, and if true, your readers will join with me in saying, "All honor to one who, in the midst of so much corruption, can face the world and feel that he is a man." In his own hearthe finds his reward. Mr. M. is also very attentive to strangers here, water meter but de firem and tenderling candoca atomit.

Some of them (the one on board of which we are staying) have been here a week, and have on board about twenty-five tons of guano. The launches of our ship have been at the shutes at four o'clock each morning. This seems hard, but on some accounts not so bad an arrangement, as a vessel can employ the first few days in discharging bellast and preparing to receive guano. We were ready for it when we arrived, and might have, if we could have got it, five hundred tons on board instead of twenty five. But here is the injustice of which they all complain. An American vessel came to anchor last night (Sunday), and this morning is receiving guano as fast as she wanus it. There is nothing fair about an arrangement of this kind, and those whose interests suffer have a right to nurmur, and to complain does them no good. It only serves to keep them back. There are but two courses for captains to pursue—one is to bribe. The only other course is to scorn the bribery system, and remain here all the lay days stipulated for in the charter party.

Scientific Exploration.

(From the New Orleans Ploayune, Oct. 8.)

We have but the pleasure of an interview with Profesor E. C. Francis, of lows, who leaves to day on the steamship Empire City for Havana, in company with Profesor N. E. Moore, late President of the lown State Lyropeon of Profesor N. E. At this point our travellers expect to take their leave for a time of the scenes of civilized life, and seeking some of the bead waters of the Amazon, to foliow their course for thousands of miles through the great level regions of Southern America, until they empty in the Atlantic ocean. The enterprise is one that commends itself to every inquiring mind, and under the guidance of the emisent gentlemen who conduct is, we doubt not it will be fruitful in feientific and also in practical results. We wish them a heartielt God speed on their long and toil-some journey, and at the same time congratulate our young and prosperous sister state, lows, upon the grandeur of the enterprise which she has sent forth in her youthful time.
